

GETTING THE STORY RIGHT

SINIXT PEOPLE ARE PART OF THE SYILX OKANAGAN NATION

For Journalists

A Primer for Reporting About Sinixt Stories

The purpose of this document is to encourage journalists to gain a better understanding of the Sinixt people and to include Sinixt voices from both Canada and the US. The Sinixt have always been part of the Sylx Okanagan Nation. Getting the story right is understanding that the newly-formed Sinixt Confederacy is not a representative of all people of Sinixt ancestry. There are many Sinixt people in Canada within the constituent communities of the Sylx Okanagan Nation (Lower Similkameen Indian Band, Okanagan Indian Band, Osoyoos Indian Band, Penticton Indian Band, Upper Similkameen Indian Band, Upper Nicola Band, and Westbank First Nation). The Sylx Okanagan Nation, represented by its Chiefs Executive Council, is the representative of Sylx people (including the Sinixt) in Canada.

Journalists are strongly encouraged to seek comment from the Chiefs Executive Council, through the Okanagan Nation Alliance, to ensure accurate reporting on stories about Sinixt people and history in the Arrow Lakes.

Photo: Syilx youth gathered along n̓x̓wəntkʷitkʷ (Columbia River) in sn̓luxwqnm (Castlegar).

Syilx Okanagan Nation

One Language. One Land. One Culture. One People.

Sinixt people have always been part of the Syilx Okanagan Nation. The Syilx, including the Sinixt, are nsyilxcən-speaking people and we have always been—and always will be—united by our common nsyilxcən language, our tmx̓wulax̓w (land,) and our sqix̓wɫcawt (culture).

One Language: The Syilx Okanagan Nation is composed of nsyilxcən-speaking people and includes the contemporary communities of Okanagan Indian Band, Osoyoos Indian Band, Lower Similkameen Band, Penticton Indian Band, Upper Nicola Band, Upper Similkameen Band and Westbank First Nation. People of Sinixt ancestry are members of these communities.

One Land: The Syilx Okanagan Nation holds and exercises title to our Territory, including the Arrow Lakes area. We have claimed, relied upon and stewarded our Territory for its tmx̓wulax̓w (land) and tmix̓w (all living things) for thousands of years as reflected in our oral history and land use practices.

Since the imposition of the Canada-US border, we are now a transboundary people forced to be members of colonial “reserves” and “reservations” throughout our unceded territory on both sides of that border.

One Culture: The Syilx Okanagan are united by our common nsyilxcən language, our tmx̓wulax̓w (land,) and our sqilx̓wcaʷt (culture), which includes our shared captik̓wɫ (sacred stories).

One People: Just as there are Sinixt people in the US, there are also many Sinixt descendants in Syilx Okanagan communities in Canada.

One People/One Nation: The Syilx Okanagan Nation has one language, one land, one culture and one people.

Syilx Okanagan, including Sinixt, in Canada

Unchanging stə́taʔt (the-truth-way or rights)

In 1846, the Territory and membership of the Syilx Okanagan Nation were split when the Canada-United States border was drawn across our Territory without our consent. This had many impacts on our Nation, including the separation of our lands and the separation of families. Due to the tragedies of colonization, Syilx Okanagan people from the Eastern parts of Syilx Okanagan Territory were dispersed. Some remained in what is now known as British Columbia, moving to sister communities in the Okanagan region of our Territory. Others moved within the Territory to what is now known as Washington State, settling at the Colville reservation. In 1956, the Arrow Lakes Band was declared extinct by the Government of Canada just prior to the flooding of ancestral village sites for hydroelectric projects under the Columbia River Treaty.

The Sinixt are still here: We were displaced from our homes in the Eastern parts of our Territory. Some of our members are in the US, but many are in Canada and live within the communities comprising the Syilx Okanagan Nation. Throughout all this time, we have continued to return to the Eastern parts of Syilx Okanagan Territory, including the Arrow Lakes area, to hunt, fish, pick berries, harvest, carry out ceremony and be present on the tmxʷulaxʷ (land), maintaining connection and responsibilities.

Despite the colonial border, longstanding kinship connections between members of the Syilx Okanagan Nation communities in what is now Canada, and the Colville Confederated Tribes continue to this day.

Photo: Signing of the Unity Declaration, s̓wiws (Osoyoos).

A History of Unity Syilx Unity Declaration

On July 15th, 2010, the Syilx Unity Declaration was signed by political representatives, Elders, and respected community members from the Okanagan Nation Alliance and Colville Confederated Tribes to reflect our longstanding shared history and family ties. It highlights our common cultural, familial, territorial, economic, and political ties as Syilx Okanagan people.

The Syilx Unity Declaration opens as follows:

Members of the Okanagan Nation Alliance and Colville Confederated Tribes make this declaration to signify unity between the Syilx Nation. The Parties have owned and occupied their indigenous homelands since time immemorial; and without consultation or agreement with the Parties, colonizing governments established an international boundary, bisecting the Parties' homelands; and the Parties never agreed to or acquiesced to the international boundary at the 49th parallel; and despite the international boundary the Parties remain united through cultural, familial, territorial, economic, and political ties; and the Parties wish to strengthen this unity politically, culturally, and economically; and the Parties understand that working together for the Parties rights, title, and claims in unity best serves our collective interests.

Despite Colville Confederated Tribes' decision to walk away from the declaration in recent years, the Syilx Okanagan Nation communities north of the border remain committed to our kinship ties, our collective interests, and the principle of unity.

Supreme Court Ruling

The Desautel Decision¹

Summary of the Case: Richard Desautel is a Sinixt member of the Lakes Tribe of the Confederated Colville Tribes and a United States citizen. In 2010, he was charged with killing an elk without a hunting license in the Arrow Lakes region of BC. He argued that he was exercising his Aboriginal right to hunt in the traditional territory of his Sinixt ancestors. The central question for the Supreme Court was whether people who are not Canadian citizens, and do not live in Canada, can have and exercise an Aboriginal right to hunt in Canada, protected under s.35 of the Canadian Constitution.

In 2021, the case reached the Supreme Court of Canada, which found that “Aboriginal peoples of Canada” means the modern-day successors of Aboriginal societies that occupied what is now Canada at the time of European contact, even if such groups are now located outside Canada.

The Court found that the Lakes Tribe is one successor group of the Sinixt people who, at the time of contact, occupied territory that extended from what is now BC in the north into what is now Washington State in the south. This meant that Richard Desautel was exercising an Aboriginal right to hunt and was properly acquitted of all charges. The Court was careful to make it clear that there may be other successor groups representing people of Sinixt ancestry.

Syilx Okanagan in Canada Intervene: The Okanagan Nation Alliance was an intervener in R. v. Desautel at every level of appeal. This is because Sinixt people have always been part of the Syilx Okanagan Nation, and the Arrow Lakes area is part of Syilx Okanagan Territory. It was important to have the voices of Canadian Sinixt people included. Syilx Elders calyx (Richard Armstrong) and skālita? (Hazel Squakin)—respected language speakers and knowledge keepers from the Syilx Okanagan Nation in Canada— testified at the trial. Calyx identified his genealogical connections to Sinixt ancestors, hunting and carrying out ceremony in the Eastern part of the Syilx territory, including the Arrow lakes, and his identity as both Syilx and Sinixt. skālita? identified her genealogical connections to the Sinixt, as well as other Syilx Okanagan Nation families in Canada that have Sinixt ancestry. She also gave evidence that Syilx and Sinixt share the nsyilcen language and all are Syilx people.

[1] For the Supreme Court of Canada summary of R. v. Desautel, see this Case in Brief at <https://www.scc-csc.ca/case-dossier/cb/2021/38734-eng.pdf>

Photo: Syilx dancers at kłamiṭp (Nelson).

The Problem of Historical Revisionism and Relying on the “Sinixt Confederacy” for Information about Sinixt People and Issues

naqsmiʔst xəl tmix^w

The “Sinixt Confederacy” is a new entity that was created in 2023 by the Colville Confederated Tribes, an American tribal organization, through their Colville Business Council. The unilateral creation of this American-style confederacy and its assertion of exclusive Aboriginal rights and title in the Arrow Lakes area of Syilx Okanagan territory, has created conflict within our previously unified Syilx Okanagan Nation.

The Confederacy claims to represent the interests of all Sinixt peoples in Canada, and that they are the only group with rights in the Arrow Lakes area. In truth-testing this claim, it’s important to revisit the finding in Desautel that the Lakes Tribe of the Colville Confederated Tribes is one successor group to the Sinixt: the Court did not find the Lakes Tribe to be the only successor group. In Canada, the Syilx Okanagan Nation, as represented by the Chiefs Executive Council is the representative of the Syilx Okanagan Nation and the successor group for Sinixt descendants.

The story of the historical denial and alleged “extinction” of the Sinixt is tragic, but it should not be used to exclude the Syilx Okanagan Nation from our Territory or deny the identity of Syilx Okanagan peoples in Canada who are of Sinixt descent. Syilx Okanagan people have fought for over a century against the denial of our rights by colonial governments and settlers, including in the Eastern parts of our Territory.

Relying on the Sinixt Confederacy and the Colville Confederated Tribes for information about Sinixt—to the exclusion of the Syilx Okanagan Nation as represented by the Chiefs Executive Council, the representative of Sinixt people in Canada—is inappropriate and perpetuates colonial injustices. It also puts the interests of a US-based tribe above the rights and interests of members of the Syilx Okanagan Nation in Canada.

A Victory for All Syilx Okanagan People: The Chiefs Executive Council considers the court ruling to be a victory for all Syilx Okanagan people. Syilx Okanagan Nation members continue to use the Eastern parts of our territory, including the Arrow Lakes area. The case confirmed Sinixt Aboriginal hunting rights in the Arrow Lakes, which is critically important to the Syilx Okanagan Nation, particularly given the Crown’s denial of those rights over many generations.

More than One Sinixt Successor Group: The Supreme Court found the Lakes Tribe of the Colville Confederated Tribes to be one successor group to the Sinixt, but the Court expressly noted that there may be other successor groups. In Canada, the Syilx Okanagan Nation is the successor group for the Sinixt. Many members of our communities are of Sinixt descent.

How to Ethically Report Sinixt Stories in the Arrow Lakes

niʔɬayp kus alaʔx

1. Consult the Syilx Okanagan Nation

Consulting, speaking or making decisions about anything to do with the Syilx Okanagan Territory, including the Eastern parts of our Territory, must begin by consulting with the Syilx Okanagan Nation, as represented by the Chiefs Executive Council. Failing to do so is potentially illegal, revisionist, colonial, and damaging. Contact the Syilx Okanagan Nation directly to engage.

2. Understand that the Sinixt are part of the Syilx Okanagan Nation

In Canada, the definition of an Indigenous Nation is one language, one land, one culture, one people. The Syilx Okanagan Nation, including those who are Sinixt, share Syilx Okanagan Territory, share our common nsyilxcən language, share our captikʷł (sacred stories), culture, ways of being and ancestors. The Syilx Okanagan Nation is the representative of the Sinixt in Canada.

3. Listen, Learn, Ask

Diversify and evaluate your sources. Have you read both widely and laterally to seek out diverse and conflicting points of view? Are your sources credible? What are their motivations? Educate yourself by listening to Indigenous people who are the experts on Syilx Okanagan culture, history and Territory. When you hear conflicting or unclear claims, ask the Nations and the Elders themselves for clarification.

4. Slow Down and Step Back

When faced with competing historical or cultural claims, it is best to slow down, step back and re-double your efforts to listen, learn, and ask. Recognize that the history of colonization has created complex relationships amongst Indigenous peoples and organizations. Speak with Syilx Okanagan Nation representatives. Stay humble and keep learning.

Reconciliation requires taking the time to truly understand the Territory, culture and history of Nations—including the impacts of colonization and resulting complexities.

Photo: Syilx Okanagan Nation flag over nǰwəntkʷitkw (Columbia River). Credit Aaron Hemens, Indiginews.

Stay Connected and Learn More

Follow Us

Information is also shared through ONA social media platforms

For More Information:

Tara Montgomery
ONA Communications Lead

e: tmontgomery@syilx.org
t: 1-250-862-6866

Okanagan Nation Alliance
#101, 3535 Old Okanagan Hwy
Westbank, BC, V4T 3L7
1-250-707-0095

www.syilx.org/arrowlakes

Syilx

One Language
One Land
One Culture
One People

